Active After Schools –

Our first week of Active After schools, run in conjunction with the Tennis and Basketball clubs has been very successful.

Thank you to Carly Heintze and Terri Walker for making this possible. Please note that the Aussie Hoops Basketball session on Monday nights will finish at 4.15 rather than 4.30 as advertised in last week's newsletter.

Last Day for Year 12s –

The Year 12s last official day of school has arrived!! They have provided the staff and students with lots of laughs with a range of practical jokes to greet everyone as they arrived today. We wish them very well over the next 4 weeks as they complete their VCE exams, and look forward to celebrating the real end to their year at the Year 12 Dinner on Friday the 15th of November.

Staffing News –

It is with great regret that I have to inform you that Bradley Sheridan has decided to move to a new position in Adelaide for 2014.

He has accepted a mathematics position at St Patricks Technical School. Although Brad was reluctant to leave our school, he still has ambitions to play football at a high standard.

We wish him all the very best in his teaching and football careers. We are now advertising for an experienced VCE Maths and Science teacher for 2014 and beyond.

World Teachers Day -

Today is World Teachers Day and I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of our teachers, for the very special work they do. We are very fortunate to have a dedicated and highly effective staff at our school. They continually strive to improve their practice and to ensure that your children achieve the outcomes of which they are capable.

Secondhand Texts -

I draw your attention to the list of texts which may be re-used in class next year - see page 6. If you wish to have any of these advertised for sale the return slip needs to be at the front office by Wednesday morning.

Some students may wish to contact their peers in higher levels to make their own arrangements for purchasing secondhand texts.

Camps -

Our Year 11 Outdoor Ed students are off to Port Elliot next week with Josh and Jaimi Willersdorf. They will be undertaking a variety of water-based activities, as well as bike riding.

Thanks to Ken Chaplin, who will be assisting with the use of his boat, and as an instructor.

Hopefully, the weather will be warmer than this week for them. The following week will see our Year 9/10 Sport & Rec students travelling to Mt Arapiles for cycling and rock climbing activities which are a component of their course.

Open Day 2014 -

Council has approved a request from staff to conduct next year's Open Day a week earlier, to avoid a clash with the Murray Bridge HPV. Accordingly, it is scheduled for the second last Friday of term 3.

Memory Training -

The school has recently received information regarding Cogmed, a working memory program offered to students. This is an evidence-based, computerised training program designed to improve attention by effectively increasing working memory capacity over a 5 week period. Published studies have shown Cogmed training to address math skills, reading comprehension and attention deficits. After using Cogmed parents and teachers have reported improved social skills, taking initiative, remembering instructions, and completing assignments more independently. The objective is better academic results, particularly in reading comprehension and math. If you are interested, check out their website at www.cogmed.com.au

Chapter 12

School

Memories of school often fade, but for me there will be one moment that will last a lifetime.

I remember the day I was told that I was repeating year two. My teacher, Miss Woodville, told me that I would be her helper next year. 'Helper', it's a funny word.

I recall the first day of repeating year two. We were doing a mathematics sheet. I got it all right. At that moment, I thought, this isn't that bad. I had no idea what impact this decision would have on my life, and my self-esteem.

At the time I was repeating year two, I had no idea what had happened. As the years went on, I started to comprehend the impact, what it truly meant. I don't know why being kept down affected me so much. It played on my mind frequently. Most days were a reminder that I was older than everyone else in my year. Shame was the main feeling I had. I would try and figure out a way to get back to my old year level. Day after day, I would imagine Miss Woodville, taking me out of the room and saying that I had obtained great marks and was going back to my old grade. The sad thing was, the dream never became a reality.

I never felt smart. The fact that I had to be in a class with people who were at my level, but not my age, made me feel appalled. I was repelled. I was disgusted. I was sickened. I started to really hate anything to do with school. I don't think it was the learning; I think it was the fact that I was older than everyone else.

The person, who I was fighting, was myself.

Year 5 was the year we had the Wannabebetter Primary School election. I was the Prime Minister of my party and that was the first time I ever felt like I could achieve something. For once in my life, I was the leader and everything we did came back to me. The cherry on top, was the fact that my political party won. After that, I realised I could achieve more than I thought I could. Winning the election gave me the courage and determination to be the best.

In year 6, I started to take an interest in History and Classical Literature. From there I read more and more, and started to love History and English. As my primary school education came to an end, I realised, so much of what I achieved, came from being kept down. I believe the moment I finally accepted being kept down, that it was for the better, was when I got my end of year report. I got an A in English. So, after that, I decided that I would leave all my hate and anger towards school, behind me, and start anew. Years have gone by, but I still remember, 'The roots of education are bitter, but the fruit is sweet'. Aristotle

The Election

It is raining outside, but that isn't why I am shivering. Tears fill my eyes. Panic tearing through me. My face, staring back at me. A reflection from one of the many windows in the assembly hall. Blue eyes stricken with fear. Unable to focus on the rows of seats. Staring at the stage where I fear to stand. My usual effervescent and bubbly personality, replaced by nervousness and dread.

It was Election Day. Fliers hanging up. Brochures handed out. A 3D model proudly on show next to the stage.

My group, 'Students Choice', was depending on me. I needed to persuade everyone to vote for us to lead the school.

We were the last to present our speeches. The Prime Minister of 'Students Choice', my friend Stephanie, steps up to the stage. She presents a clear and well thought-out presentation. If only I had confidence that I could do the same. It nears the end of her speech. I start to shake and sweat. I know the moment has come.

It's my turn. My teacher calls out my name and I step up to the podium. So many people. So many eyes glaring at me. We live in a small community, but that hasn't stopped there being a generous crowd. What if I embarrass myself? I know so many of those people. There was one person, in particular, that our party wants to impress. John Arnold.

He is the Mildura Rural City Council Mayor. He has come down to watch our election. I can't ruin it.

Butterflies swirling like a whirlpool in my stomach. I start to feel faint. My head aching. My throat dry. I try to concentrate on the words of my speech, instead of the audience's glares. I can do it. I try to tell myself, but the words have repeated themselves too many times to mean anything.

But I can do it. I can do it. I know I can.

Believing in myself, or not, I have to present my speech. So, I open my mouth and, line by line, word by word, I do it.

'... and that is why you should vote for 'Students Choice' election party. Thank you for listening.'

The audience clap and relief washes through me. It doesn't last for long, though. It still isn't over.

We wait for the votes to be counted.

Everyone goes back onto the stage for the announcements. John Arnold steps up to the podium and gives a speech before he announces who has won the election.

'Students Choice' My party! We won!

We go to shake hands with him and Mr Arnold pulls out four glass plaques, making today even more memorable.

Steph gives a short, but meaningful speech. The crowd is charmed.

Everyone congratulates us before they leave. I am floating with happiness. I promise myself not to brag tomorrow.

My confidence and loudness is back and I can't be more pleased with myself. I did it.

It makes you realise that it's not the end of the world. I think I will always be nervous and anxious before presenting a speech, but after doing events like this I know I'll just get more confident. It'll just get easier, like they say, 'practice makes perfect'.
